Brian Devlin is in the early stages of creating a Children's War Museum(CWM) in which to present children's experience of war through their own voices and creativity.

He has been involved with our Basque Children of '37Association UK for some time now and was instrumental in setting up the highly successful exhibition at the Bradford Peace Museum. He has also introduced us to several schools where we have subsequently given talks. He is keen to include the history of the Basque Children in his museum.

The first activity of CWM has been an exhibition of children's art from Theresienstadt, a Nazi concentration camp, and also from modern Syrian child refugees. The exhibition has visited churches, schools, synagogues and galleries around the country. and has been well received.

This whole project is the result of one-man's vision coupled with a tremendous drive. As Brian says, "Now I really need to try and find a home for the museum." and he is hoping that he may be able to find it in Berwick where he hopes to develop a partnership with the local council, arts and education communities in the area.

Please come to give your support to this new venture, we wish him every success.
