Dear Friends,

We are writing to let you know that on 31 July the Cañada Blanch Centre for Contemporary Spanish Studies, London School of Economics, in lockdown since early March, will be definitively closing its doors and bringing to an end its programme of activities. In the Autumn of this year, a new “Cañada Blanch” programme will be set up at the LSE under the direction of Professor Andrés Rodríguez Pose, with interests in somewhat different fields from those that have hitherto been our principal concerns.

During the last twenty-six years, we have endeavoured to place our efforts and enthusiasm at the service of the University community and other parties interested in the history and politics of contemporary Spain. In this time, the CBC has been able to offer its public a stimulating and enriching intellectual experience thanks to the many talented people it has welcomed. Your presence at, and your contributions to, our seminars and other events have been of fundamental importance, and we wish to reiterate our heartfelt thanks for all your support and friendship.

With best wishes for the future,

Paul Preston and Susana Grau
